In an era of rising U.S.-China tensions and constrained civil society engagement, this two-day conference at the University of Rochester gathers scholars, activists, and artists to explore how cultural forms—from literature and performance to internet communities—foster transregional solidarity across the Sinosphere and beyond. We will consider the political, social, and intellectual implications of these movements, while exploring how to translate cultural theory into collective action. This event aims to strengthen cross-regional academic and activist networks and promote critical Chinese studies on a global scale.

This event is sponsored by the CNY Humanities Corridor and the Department of Anthropology at the University of Rochester.
